

Contributors:

ROBERT M. CALHOON, Professor of History at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, is the author of five books on early American history including The Loyalists in Revolutionary America, 1760-1781 (Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, 1973) and The Loyalist Perception and Other Essays (University of South Carolina Press, 1989).

KEVIN J. DELLAPE received his M.A. in history from the Pennsylvania State University in 1992; this essay is a revised version of his thesis. He is now principal of the Calvary Baptist Christian Academy in Altoona, Pennsylvania.

JAMES FARLEY is an independent scholar affiliated with the Philadelphia Center for Early American Studies. He received his doctorate from Temple University in 1991 and his dissertation has been published by Penn State Press under the title Making Arms in the Machine Age: The Frankford Arsenal, 1816-1870.

J. WALTER HIGH, Associate Professor of History at Drexel University, Philadelphia, received his doctorate from Temple University. He is currently working on the role of Pennsylvania's Anglican clergy during the American Revolution.

ANNE M. OUSTERHOUT, Professor of American Thought and Language at Michigan State University, where she received her Ph.D., is the author of A State Divided: Opposition in Pennsylvania to the American Revolution (Greenwood Press, 1987). She is now completing a biography of Elizabeth Graeme Fergusson, who lived from 1737 to 1801 near Philadelphia.

LINDA SHOPES is a historian on the staff of the Bureau of Archives and History, the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission. She has written extensively on oral history, and prepared the special oral history issue (December, 1993) of Pennsylvania History. She now advises for "Raising Our Sites: Women's History in Pennsylvania," a project of the Pennsylvania Humanities Council to integrate women's history into historic sites and museum programming.

JUDITH VAN BUSKIRK is working toward a doctorate in history at New York University under Patricia Bonomi's direction. She will be a research fellow at the Philadelphia Center for Early American Studies in 1995-96 to work on her topic of New York City under British occupation during the American Revolution.

ROSEMARY S. WARDEN, instructor in history at Penn State's Ogontz Campus, received her Ph.D. from Syracuse University. This article and a forthcoming chapter in a book on the American Revolution in Pennsylvania, edited by John Frantz and William Pencak, have evolved from her dissertation on Chester County in the Revolution.

The Pennsylvania Historical Association

c/o Penn State - Harrisburg • CRAGS Building

777 West Harrisburg Pike • Middletown, PA 17057-4898

Publishers of Pennsylvania History, a quarterly, and the Pennsylvania History Studies Series

The Pennsylvania Historical Association, in cooperation with local and regional historical societies and agencies, seeks to advance the study of Pennsylvania's heritage. It is the only statewide historical society now active in the Commonwealth. By its publication of the quarterly journal Pennsylvania History, a series of pamphlets known as The Pennsylvania History Studies, and its annual meetings held successively in different parts of the state, the association stimulates scholarly activity and arouses popular interest in the state's history.

The association's invitation is a broad one. It appeals to all those in Pennsylvania who are interested in history, regardless of whether history is for them an avocation or a vocation. It invites to membership educators at all levels, authors and editors of historical studies, administrators of institutions for the study of history, archivists, historic site supervisors, historic preservationists, and those in other professions that promote the study of history. The association welcomes both traditional and non-traditional practitioners and students of history. Please join today!
