

CONTRIBUTORS

TIM H. BLESSING is Associate Professor of History and Political Science at Alvernia College, Pennsylvania. He is co-author of Greatness in the White House (Penn State Press, 1988, 1994) and has published articles on political history in the Journal of American History and Presidential Studies Quarterly.

PAUL E. KOPPERMAN, Professor of History at Oregon State University, is the author of a number of publications, including Braddock at the Monongahela (Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Press, 1977). The primary focus of his current research is eighteenth-century British medicine, particularly army medicine, and he is working to complete a monograph on the medical history of the British Army in North America and the West Indies, 1755–1783.

DANIEL SIDORICK is a Ph.D. candidate and Adjunct Instructor in the Department of History at Temple University. His dissertation examines production strategies, work, and workers at Campbell Soup Company in Camden, New Jersey.