GEORGE W. KYTE, Associate Professor of History at Lehigh University, has long been interested in the American Revolution and in Anglo-American relations before 1812. He has published articles in many leading journals of history and is now contemplating a book on the closing campaigns of the War for American Independence.

ROBERT A. FEER is a graduate student in the History Department of Harvard University, where he is making a study of Shay's Rebellion.

FREDERICK B. TOLLES, a member of the Permanent Research Group at the Huntington Library, is this year's president of the Friends' Historical Society in England, and editor of the Bulletin of the Friends' Historical Association.

PAUL A. W. WALLACE, editor of Pennsylvania History, is noted for his work on Pennsylvania's colonial and Revolutionary periods, and for his biographies of Conrad Weiser and the Muhlenbergs. He is currently working on a comprehensive study of the Indian trails of Pennsylvania for the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission.
