DONALD H. KENT, Chief of the Division of Research and Publications, Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, has dealt with Pennsylvania history, especially that of eighteenth-century Western Pennsylvania, in various books, articles, and source publications. Recently, he has done much research on post-Revolutionary Indian relations.

MERLE H. DEARDORFF is Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Federation of Historical Societies and Vice-President of the Warren Bank and Trust Company. He knows the Senecas both from the sources and from personal acquaintance, and has published a number of articles on their history, customs, and place names in various ethnological and historical journals. Numerous historians and ethnologists have become familiar with his amazing collection of research notes and have been guided by his insights into the language and thought of the Senecas. Present-day research on the Iroquois owes much to his advice and encouragement.

NICHOLAS B. WAINWRIGHT has been Editor of the MAGAZINE since 1952. His interest in Augustus Kollner grew out of his research for the study of nineteenth-century Philadelphia lithography which the Historical Society published in 1958.

FRED D. BALDWIN, who holds the B. A. degree from North Texas State College, is a graduate student in American history at Princeton University.
