NANCY SLOCUM HORNICK, a University of Maryland Ph.D. in American Social and Intellectual History, is preparing a biography of Anthony Benezet. She is currently historian-writer with the United States National Park Service, Harpers Ferry Center, and is researching the history of Carpenters' Hall and its master-builders for a Park Service booklet.

DAVID L. SALAY is a University of Delaware doctoral candidate, the title of his dissertation being "The Production of War Material for the American Army During the Revolution: The Middle Colonies." He is employed by the New York State Historical Association in Cooperstown as Curator of Library Resources.

EDWARD T. JAMES' dissertation at Harvard was in labor history, but his career in historical editing has taken him into biography and women's history as well. He has been co-editor and editor of three Supplements to the Dictionary of American Biography and of the three-volume Notable American Women, 1607-1950. At present, he is at Radcliffe College editing a microfilm edition of Papers of the Women's Trade Union League and Its Principal Leaders.

DANIEL NELSON received his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin and is now an Associate Professor of History at the University of Akron. He is the author of Unemployment Insurance, the American Experience, 1915-35 and Managers and Workers Origins of the New Factory System 1880-1920. Presently he is working on a biography of Frederick W. Taylor.

LYNDA BELTZ is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Speech at Indiana University where she earned her Ph.D. She is writing a series of articles on the lecture careers of a number of famous Americans and hopes to do a biography of Ida M. Tarbell.

WILLIAM H. WILSON was awarded his doctorate in history by the University of Missouri and is now a Professor of History at North Texas State University. He is the author of The City Beautiful Movement in Kansas City and Coming of Age: Urban America, 1915-1945.
