KENNETH R. BOWLING has taught at Dickinson College, where he received his B.A., and at the University of Wisconsin, where he earned his Ph.D. At present he is writing a study of the location of the federal capital, 1774-1800.

ALYCE BARRY is on the administrative staff of the Annenberg Center for Communication Arts and Sciences of the University of Pennsylvania. She is currently working on a biography of Thomas Paine.

DONALD R. HICKEY, a University of Illinois Ph.D., is a Lecturer in the History Department at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He has written on Federalist opposition to the War of 1812 and is researching Jeffersonian military policy.

DENNIS CLARK, Executive Director of the Samuel S. Fels Fund, has written extensively on urban affairs and immigrant history. His most recent book deals with American ties to the violence in Northern Ireland since 1969.

DANIEL NELSON is a Professor of History at the University of Akron. His most recent publication is Managers and Workers: Origins of the New Factory System in the United States (1975), which provided the background for his work on Taylor and scientific management.

PATRICK J. MCGINNIS received his state teachers certificate from the University of West Florida. His major historical interest is United States domestic history of the late nineteenth century.
