COVER ILLUSTRATION: Liberty Triumphant: or the Downfall of Oppression. This cartoon, printed in Philadelphia in 1774, depicts America's successful boycott of British tea imports in protest of Parliament's taxation of tea in order to support the foundering East India Company. While King George is counseled by the Devil, and Lord Brute and the director of the East India Company bemoan the loss of American markets, America and her "Sons of Liberty" prepare for battle as American merchants express disappointment at the loss of profits from the tea trade. ## Contributors

MICHELLE L. CRAIG is a doctoral candidate in the department of history at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. She is completing a dissertation entitled "From Cultivation to Cup: A History of Coffee in the Atlantic World, 1765–1805."

STUART A. GREEN is a clinical professor of orthopaedic surgery at the University of California at Irvine's School of Medicine. He is an associate editor of The Journal of Orthopaedic Trauma and a deputy editor of Clinical Orthopaedics and Related Research. He is also a life member of the Friends of Franklin.

JANE T. MERRITT is associate professor of history at Old Dominion University in Virginia. Her publications include At the Crossroads: Indians and Empires on a Mid-Atlantic Frontier, 1700–1763 (2003) and several articles that explore cultural encounters between Native Americans and Euro-Americans in eighteenth-century Pennsylvania. She is currently working on a study of the tea trade, consumption, and the emergence of a global market economy in the early modern period.
