Contributors

JAMES ADAMS holds a PhD in history from Temple University and is currently lecturing at schools in the Delaware Valley. He is revising a study on cultural conceptions of vice and their impact on Gilded Age and Progressive Era society in the Philadelphia region as well as researching elite black culture in the city proper between 1860 and 1920.

STEVEN CONN teaches history at Ohio State University and is the author most recently of Do Museums Still Need Objects? (University of Pennsylvania Press, 2010).

RODNEY MADER is an associate professor of English at West Chester University of Pennsylvania, where he teaches courses in early American literature, women's and gender studies, and writing. He is a visiting research associate with the McNeil Center for Early American Studies and served as a member of the board of directors of the Friends of Graeme Park from 2004 to 2010.
