

GLOBALISM-MULTICULTURALISM-PLURALISM: IMPLICATIONS FOR WORKING AND STUDYING HERE AND THERE

Moderator: Susan Vernon-Gerstenfeld, Ph.D.
Associate Professor
Director, Puerto Rico Project Center
Worcester Polytechnic Institute

Susan Vernon-Gerstenfeld teaches research methods to students participating in off-campus applied research centers through Worcester Polytechnic Institute's extensive network of off-campus and global programs. She also directs the programs in Washington, D.C.; Limerick, Ireland; San Juan, Puerto Rico; and the one she is developing in San Jose, Costa Rica.

In addition, she teaches social psychology and serves on advisory committees to the Office of Multicultural Affairs, which is currently reviewing the needs of minorities and women on campus.

After having lived in Puerto Rico for three years in the late 1960's, she returned to the mainland and earned a Masters Degree in Social Work in 1974. After starting and directing the Department of Social Work at the Human Resource Institute, a psychiatric hospital in Boston until 1983, she continued on for a PhD in social planning, which she received in 1987 before embarking on her present career in academia.
