America’s Best Weekly:
100 Years of the Pittsburgh Courier
Opens May 15, 2010.

The Pittsburgh Courier is one of the most significant newspapers of the last century. The weekly paper focuses on news about and of interest to African Americans. In commemoration of its centennial, the History Center will explore the newspaper’s reach and impact through fascinating artifacts and audio-visual displays. America’s Best Weekly will profile the major contributors who propelled the Courier, from founder Edward Nathaniel Harleston, an employee of the H.J. Heinz Company, to long-time editor and treasurer Robert L. Vann, and others who made the paper among the most respected in its field.
